

Fallingwater Family Fun Architecture Activity Kits

For Apprentices (children) and their Master Builders (adults)

Designed for children of many ages and their adult companions, these kits are loaded with engaging tools that encourage exploration of Fallingwater and its setting by seeing, moving, listening, smelling, touching and doing.

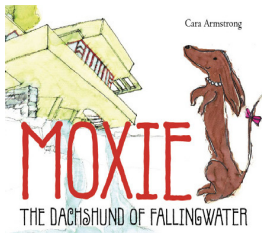

The Architecture Activity Kits highlight various details at Fallingwater similar to those that an adult group tour might experience. However, in using the Kits, children will have the experience of working with an adult to discover those details for themselves rather than being “told” about them.

Kit 1: Architecture of the Senses

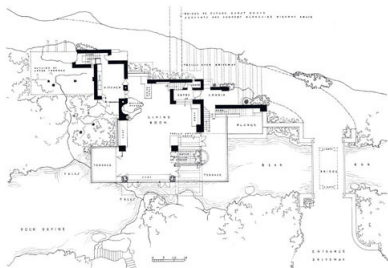

With this kit, you and your apprentices will explore Fallingwater using 4 of your 5 senses—touch, sight, sound, and smell. Activities include a scent walk, leaf rubbings, pattern making, and reading The Three Little Pigs.

Kit 2: Explore Fallingwater with Moxie

With this kit, you and your apprentices will look at Fallingwater from different perspective with activities based on the glossary found in Moxie: The Dachshund of Fallingwater. Activities include building a fairy house, making flashlight shadows, creating a Fallingwater postcard, and reading Moxie.

Kit 3: Fallingwater Inch by Inch

With this kit, you and your apprentices will be able to try various measurement, estimation, and deductive reasoning activities at Fallingwater—activities that architects use when designing buildings. Activities include creating a sound map, comparing temperature, using your body to measure and reading Measuring Penny.
